road led across Owl Creek in our front. The head of the regiment had reach the bridge, when a solid line of the enemy was discovered advancing towar l us. Col. Buckland was notified of the fact, and the regiment was again contermarched to its position in the brigade line of battle. Col. Buckland now ordered the brigade forward and had adranced about 40 rods, when we came in

At our first fire their According to the same authority they whole line wavered. They soon reformed and charged us, but were driven back with great slaughter, some of the regiments becoming so decimated that they were sent back to the rear, and that they were sent back to the rear, and second Line of Fresh Troops took no part in the battle the rest of the attacked Prentiss did he fall back and day. After fighting for an hour one of abandon his camp, which was at about Gen. Sherman's Aides came to Col. Buck- 9 a. m. But we will let Gen. Prentiss land and said:

"The General desires to know whether you can hold your position ?"

We held our original position for three nortal hours under a storm of shot and shell and a withering fire of buck and ball from rebel infantry until 10 o'clock a. m., when the troops on our left were driven back, which exposed our left flank to an enfilading fire. This compelled us to fall back to our color-line. where we fixed bayonets for a charge, While here a battery of artillery came to our assistance, but left again without firing a gun. Just as the enemy began to press us on our left, Capt. Hammond, of Gen. Sherman's staff, rode up and

"Gen. Sherman's orders are to fall back and form a new line back of our amp, on the Purdy road."

We about-faced and marched through our camp, leaving the ground strewn with our killed and wounded. The enemy followed rapidly, and as soon as they reached our camps, the Confederate writers state, they commenced tance to another line, where we finally line. A singular time for the army to held the enemy in check. At nightfall be asleep. Gen. Sherman held the bridge across Snake Creek-over which Gen. Lew Snake Creek—over which Gen. Lew Mallace crossed his division during the pickt—which is a mile and a half from dated April 5, 1880, in which he says: night-which is a mile and a half from night—which is a mile and a half from the Landing, making the distance only one mile less than when the battle commenced in the morning. the last charge on our lines that day.

Gen. Buell's troops now began to srive, and as they picked their way up through the stragglers they no doubt thought that what they saw before them was all that was left of General Grant's whole army. Any candid soldier will admit that at the Landing was no place to judge of what was transpiring at the front. Such scenes have been witnessed in more than one great battle of the war. Take, for instance, the battle of Chickamauga. While part of the army, was deleated and driven back to Chattanooga, Gen. Thomas, with his troops held the left and saved the day; but the rear was no place to judge what Gen. Thomas was doing at the front. So it

ONCE MORE IN OUR TENTS that had been occupied by the Confederates the night before.

We have shown that our brigade was in line of battle long before the battle commenced on Sanday morning, and now let us trace the other troops that cupled the troat line that me occupied the front line that morning, and see if we can find what regiments were caught in their beds by the Confederates. On the left of our brigade was Shorman's Third Brigade, with its right resting on the church. General Shorman, in his official report, says:

Shorting after 7 a. m., with my setter staff, I rode along a portion of our front, and when is an open field better Apple " regiment (of the Third Propes) in any party, litting any Colory, T. D. Moidday. About 8 a. m. I become a party and the first time that the many designed.

the regiments of my division were then in lies of battle at their proper posts. Gen. McClernand had already sent three regiments, at Gen. Sherman's request, to reinforce the latter's left. We pass on and next reach Gen. Prentiss's Division. There is abundant evidence, both from Union and Confederate sources, to prove that Gen. Prentise's troops were in line of battle soon after daylight, and when the pickets fell back the whole line was advanced one-fourth of a mile before the battle commenced fall view and within short musket range in their faces. "Tell Gen. Sherman that my men are fighting bravely, and that we can hold our position."

Three separate assaults were made to force our line by fresh troops, but at each charge they were sent reeling back to the shelter of the banks of Owl Creek, where they returned our fire, cutting fearful gaps in our line, but

THE RHIGADE STOOD FIRM.

The Confederate General B. W. Duke, in his history of the battle of Shilob, gives the following description of their epulse in front of our brigade:

While Bnekland's and McDowel's Brigades of Sherman's Division had not been facedy as salled at the inception of the Confederates advance, they very soon received their full share of attention. The ground which they complet, however, was perhaps altogether the strongest points on the line. Every demonstration made against it was repulsed. Artilizer was used in vain. There remain but two more brigades to notice that were on the front line. Col. Stewart commanded the Second Brigade of Sherman's Division, which was encamped on the extreme left near the Tennessee river, and Col. McDowell the First Brigade, joining our brigade on the extreme right. As the first attack was made near the center of our line, it gave the troops on the flanks

AMPLE TIME TO PREPARE for the conflict before the battle reache them; therefore it is useless to hunt for the sleeping soldiers in their camps.

One of our most prominent military critics, who has not been partial to either Gens. Grant or Sherman, in his criticism of the life of the Confederate Gen. A. S. Johnston by his son, Col. W. P. Johnston, sums up the subject as follows : with our killed and wounded. The stop, with our killed and wounded. The stop, which was at 14 col. W. P. Johnston states that Gen. A. S. Johnston timed the first gun, which was at 14 minutes past 5. He quotes Col. Preston, of Gen. Johnston's staff, as saying that Prentise's camp was captured between 7 and 8 a. m. Gen. Sherman says: "About 8 a. m. I became satisfied for the first time that the enemy designed a determined attack on the whole camp."

Closing Remarks-Demott Wood-The selections were all appropriate and the speakers all acquitted themselves in the highest degree. The song, "The Boy's Best Friend is His Mother" by Misses Maud and May Wright was loudly applauded. The recitation "The Coquett" spoken by Elizabeth Edwards, now in her 84th year was quite a surprise to her friends. talk but the spirit of other years seemed to animate her breast. The closing

They did not think her equal to the remarks of Mr. Woodmansee were well received and very appropriate. The music furnished by the Carytown String Band and that by the vocal class, consisting of Messra, Evan Good, James Wright, Charles Woodmansee, Mrs. James Wright, Mrs. Charles Woodmansee, Misses Mary Kinzey and Sadie Conard, was of the best and highly appreciated by the friends. THE REUNION. Think not I wish not, with my race, To see how great has grown to be The Conard and the Edwards tree, And meet my kindred face to face.

Though leagues away from you I roam, The dust of years, the rust of care, May dim, but cannot wholly wear From out my heart my love of home

From far, beneath the oaken tree, Your meeting in the good, green wood, All kith and kindred, of one blood, As in a vision, I will see.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The reculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetito. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio,

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence. "Hood's Barsaparilla tones up my system, pursies my blood, shurrens my annetic, and pursies my blood, shurrens my annetic, and seems to make me over." J. l'. Thompson, Register of Deeds, Lovell, Mass. "Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. Barbington, 130 Bank Street, New York City.
